

Suwannee River Wilderness State Trail

The storied Suwannee River begins in Georgia's Okefenokee Swamp and flows 246 miles to the Gulf of Mexico. It is one of the longest undammed rivers in the United States. The river is known for its high limestone banks, arching live oaks, and the highest concentration of freshwater springs in the country. Overnight opportunities at river camps, state parks, and county and private campgrounds are generally available at 10- to 15-mile intervals. This data book is intended to help with planning for overnight trips.

The Suwannee River Wilderness Trail begins at the Highway 41 Bridge ramp in White Springs Wayside Park (river mile 171). It is not recommended to leave a parked vehicle there overnight, so one may check about leaving a vehicle at Stephen Foster Folk Culture Center State Park just west of White Springs (river mile 168.3), where you can also launch, or check with American Canoe Adventures in downtown White Springs. If paddling above White Springs, primitive camping is the primary option and it is highly recommended to portage around Big Shoals, Florida's only class 3 rapids, due to sharp limestone rocks.

River Camps

Five river camps are situated along the river and are currently available for reservations. Platforms and campsites that are not reserved are available on a first-come, first-served basis. Reservations are encouraged. Each river camp features five screened sleeping pavilions, primitive campsites, and restrooms and hot showers. Each pavilion can sleep up to eight people and they have ceiling fans, electricity and hooks for hammocks. They are not accessible to users by vehicle. One can also camp along the river on land managed by the Suwannee

River Water Management District with a free special use authorization permit. Call 386-362-1001 or email recreation@srwmd.org. However, one reason the river camps were established was to reduce the impacts of primitive camping along the river.

Water Levels

The USGS gage at White Springs should read above 52 feet for ideal paddling conditions, but paddling can be dangerous when it is above 62 feet and some river camps and parks can be closed. Check the Suwannee River Wilderness State Trail website for closure information.
